Statement following recent volatility of financial instruments

Zeist, 11 September 2019 – Due to recent volatility in the pricing of our outstanding capital instruments, and possible questions related to these movements, we issue the following statement:

Achmea B.V. continuously monitors market conditions to further optimise its capital structure. One of the possibilities for such an optimisation can be the issuance of perpetual subordinated notes. However, such an issuance depends on various factors, including market conditions. Should Achmea B.V. decide to issue financial instruments, it will be communicated to the market through our regular corporate communication channels, among which Bloomberg. Information regarding currently outstanding instruments, such as exercising possible call options on outstanding capital instruments, will be published in a similar manner.

In case of questions, please contact our Investor Relations team.
