Amersfoort, 10 February 2006

Nutreco business announcements

Nutreco made three announcements today about its operational animal nutrition and genetics business:

Russia

Nutreco's subsidiary Trouw Nutrition International (TNI) will merge its animal nutrition activities in Russia by 1 April 2006 with its current Russian distributor, ZAO Hifeed bv, into the new Russian company Techkorm. The investment figure has not been disclosed. Nutreco holds the majority in this joint venture, which currently employs 70 people. Techkorm provides key agro-industrial regions of the Russian Federation with speciality feeds. These regions show overall large growth potential.

Hypor joint venture

Nutreco has acquired the remaining 50% of the shares of swine genetics company Hypor from Canadian joint venture partner Investment Saskatchewan. The price has not been disclosed. Total turnover of the Hypor business is approximately EUR 35 million. Hypor has around 250 employees. The reason behind the transaction is that Nutreco prefers to have full management control in order to develop its international swine genetics business within its breeding division Euribrid. The joint venture was founded in 2003.

Hendrix

Nutreco's compound feed subsidiary Hendrix will further optimise its supply chain in the Benelux and implement a new logistical information system (ERP). As a consequence of this, Hendrix will close its production site in Meppel in the Netherlands and relocate the production to its plant in Helmond in the same country. Due to these measures, Hendrix will reduce its staff with 90 full time equivalents (FTE's). In 2005 Hendrix managed to increase its market share in the Benelux.
