Heijmans builds new data centre in The Netherlands

Heijmans will build a new data centre in The Netherlands for a global player in data centres and internet connections. The order has a contract value of more than €40 million.

Society's digitization is creating increasing dependence on the availability, processing and storage of data. Heijmans has gained considerable experience in the construction and maintenance of data centres. Heijmans has already built the Amsterdam Data Tower, and manages a number of data centres for the Netherlands' central government.
